This breathtaking superyacht called "IRON MAN" made its debut at the recent Cannes Yachting Festival.

Measuring 38.10 m, the yacht went under the microscope after the event and we can now reveal some of the first on board images of the yacht.

As a smaller version of Benetti's 140 Veloce series, the Vivace 125 too is built on an increasingly popular split-personality semi displacement (Displacement to Planning, or D2P in short) hull form that offers a higher top speed in semi planning mode, while providing an economical range during full displacement cruising. She is equipped with an innovative series of azimuth transitions designed specifically by Rolls Royce for Benetti, called carbon Azipull 65C pods.

Another grand entertainment area on board is the generous foredeck, which has been divided into smaller gathering and sun bathing areas. This is also where guests can relax in the Jacuzzi, treated to uninterrupted views and ahead.

The interior was designed by designer Alfred Karram Jr, who adopted the owner's youthful spirit and request for a modern, yet user friendly space. "The goal of the design concept for the Ironman project was to create a one of a kind space that would boast a highly innovative modern aesthetic through the use of sharp and dramatic geometries," says Karram.

Take a look!
